SOUTHERN MADE MODERN

MODERN FURNITURE, MADE SOUTHERN.

I don't have a degree in design and I never went to school for woodworking. What I did was dream, learn and create. I've had this vision since I was a kid and I'm always excited to see what unfolds next.

Alex Geriner

Owner / Founder / Creative Director

Alex Geriner is the founder, owner and creative director of Doorman. Born and raised in southern Louisiana by a mother in the furniture industry and a father with a sharp mind for engineering, Alex had a penchant for building from a young age.

After graduating from college in Mississippi, Alex returned to his home state and moved to New Orleans. With a limited post-graduate budget for furnishing his 1880s era apartment, Alex took matters into his own hands and decided to create his own.

His first piece was an antique headboard, which he crafted from a five-panel door (hence Doorman) salvaged from a home flooded by Hurricane Katrina, inlaying the old growth cypress panels with ornate, 19th century tin. Word spread and Alex began building and selling more beds, slowly growing his operation and expanding offerings.

Today Doorman is a New Orleans-based furniture brand offering handmade, uniquely Southern, high-quality pieces for the home, directly to consumers online. Each piece is conceptualized by Alex and handcrafted by his skillful team of woodworkers and experienced artisans.
